A young woman who was born without her left arm is in the running to be crowned Miss America 2014 after winning the title of Miss Iowa.

Nicole Kelly was crowned Miss Iowa on June 7 and says she plans to use the Miss America *pageant to speak about overcoming disabilities.

In her biography on the Miss Iowa website, the 23-year-old said she has faced questions about her missing arm ever since she was a little girl.

"My favorite explanation until now has been that it was bitten off by a shark... a perfect explanation for someone from Iowa," said Ms. Kelly, who has a degree in directing and theater management from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"As I grew older, I learned to deal with the initial stares I received from people with my outgoing personality. I promised myself I would never give in."

Ms. Kelly said her determined attitude led her to give everything a go, including baseball, dancing and diving.

"There was nothing I would not try," she said.

"I found my passion within a world where I was giving people permission to stare: the stage."

Ms. Kelly said she never expected to become a beauty queen but is thrilled she is getting the chance to speak out about disabilities.

"It is a tremendous honor to have the chance to inform people about how to overcome disabilities. I am thrilled to continue my adventure by speaking out and touching lives as Miss Iowa 2013," she said.

The Miss America pageant will be held in New Jersey on September 15.

- Mother: Jenny, I am concerned about your future.
- Daughter: Don't worry about me, Mum. I'm in love with Jack and I plan to marry him someday.
- Mother: That's not what I'm talking about.
- Daughter: Well, I have a lot of friends and I keep myself busy with my hobbies.
- Mother: Hobbies? What hobbies?
- Daughter: Are you kidding me? You know I have so many hobbies.
- Mother: Like what? I never see you exercising and you don't belong to any teams.
- Daughter: I am not interested in doing things that make me tired and sweaty. I love going shopping, meeting my friends and updating my Facebook page.
- Mother: They don't seem like hobbies to me. Anyway, how is doing those things going to help you find a good job one day?
- Daughter: I have had many jobs.
- Mother: Yes, but the longest one was at the supermarket and it only lasted two weeks. They fired you because you kept giving the customers the wrong change!
- Daughter: What about my job in the dress shop? I did that for nearly a month and I loved working there most of all.
- Mother: But you spent more money there than you earned!
- Daughter: I had to, Mum. When you work in a dress shop you have to buy their most fashionable items and wear them as you work. It made me feel like a model.
- Mother: What was wrong with the bookstore?
- Daughter: Working there was so boring.
- Mother: And the restaurant?
- Daughter: Oh, come on Mum! I could not stand wearing that awful uniform!
- Mother: Well, why don't you go to college?
- Daughter: Perhaps I will. But I don't want to become a high school teacher. It is so difficult to understand kids these days.
